The work of the National Conference, defined as promoting "civilized harmonious relations among people of differing cultures," was carried on last year out of forty regional and area offices serving 2,000 communities. Religious functions included the sponsoring of Religious Book Week and the Religious News Service and work done in cooperation with the Federal Council of Churches, the Commission on American Citizenship of the Catholic hierarchy and the Synagogue Council of America.

Recognizing that schools can serve either as agents for prejudice or tolerance, the National Conference and the American Council on Education last year sponsored the study of textbooks to remove literature designed to encourage interracial understanding.

The report also dwells on the work done by the National Conference in service camps. Soldiers and sailors in 843 bases — a total audience of more than 5,000,000 service men and women — participated in discussion and consultation programs sponsored by the National Conference.

MOST SHOCKING DOCUMENT EVER ISSUED BY U.S. INDICTS GERMAN NATION FOR EXTERMINATION AND TORTURE

The U.S. War Refugee Board, in what was regarded as the most shocking document ever issued by a United States government agency, made public on November 25 in Washington an official report on German atrocities that have caused the death of "millions of innocent civilians — Jews and Christians alike — all over Europe."

The "revolting and diabolical" German atrocities were described as a "campaign of terror and brutality which is unprecedented in all history and which even now continues unabated and is part of the German plan to subjugate the free peoples of the world."

The 25,000-word indictment of Germany was assembled by the W. R. B. as one of the agencies under the executive offices of the President of the United States. The board consists of the three highest ranking Cabinet officials — Cordell Hull, Secretary of State; Henry Morgenthau Jr., Secretary of the Treasury; and Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War. John W. Pehle is the board's executive director.

The report is an indictment of the entire German nation, says the New York Herald Tribune for the board makes clear that the atrocities were directed from Berlin, and that they were German atrocities which were planned and executed by Germans. There is no singling out of the Nazi party or the Gestapo as being responsible for the horrible deeds described. Nor is there any hint that the thousands of Germans involved made any protest regarding what the board says is "the German campaign of extermination and torture."

The information contained in the report came from two young Slovakian Jews who escaped in April, 1944, after passing two years in German concentration camps at Auschwitz and Birkenau in southwestern Poland, and from a non-Jewish Polish major, the only survivor of a group of sixty men imprisoned at Auschwitz.

The information supplied by these three men, whose names were not made public in the interests of their own safety, has been checked, rechecked and verified in every way, the board said — with reports from inside German-dominated areas and by cross-examination of the three men and comparison of their statements.

The report reveals that 1,765,000 Jews were gassed to death at Birkenau alone between April, 1942, and April, 1944, including 900,000 Poles; 100,000 Dutch; 45,-

First U. S. Army Nurse Killed On Western Front Is Jewish Girl

It was nearly 2 o'clock in the morning, but Lieut. Frances Slanger, a graduate of the Boston City Hospital, could not sleep. Carefully, so as not to disturb her tentmates, she eased out of her cot and by flashlight began writing down some of the things about American doughboys they had been discussing earlier in the night.

Their conversation had been prompted by a story in which the G.I.'s praised the nurses for "roughing it."

"We have learned a great deal about our American soldier and the stuff he is made of," she wrote. "The wounded do not cry. Their buddies come first. The patience and determination they show, the courage and fortitude they have is something always to behold."

The next morning she sent it to her [illegible] — [illegible]

[illegible] of the [illegible] Stars and Stripes published the letter on Nov. 7 under the title "Nurse Writes Editorial."

But the soldier-editor did not know at that time that Nurse Slanger was killed by a German shell the night she mailed the letter and had been buried in the mud in a military cemetery — the first American Army nurse on the Rights Of Non-Jews Under [illegible]

[illegible] New York [illegible] Kohn, political secretary of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, published in the Palestine Post.

Dr. Kohn was replying to a non-Jewish resident of Trans-Jordan who asked in space of the newspaper what guarantees for the protection of non-Jewish citizens would be available under the constitution of the proposed Jewish State.

Dr. Kohn declared that the Jewish Commonwealth was not conceived as an exclusively Jewish polity because it was realized that a considerable part of its population would not be Jewish.

"The Commonwealth is to be designated as Jewish because it is intended to be the national home of the Jewish people and, with that end in view, is open to any who desire to settle in Palestine. That function, indeed, will be its principle 'raison d'être.'"

Dr. Kohn then proceeded to outline the safeguards non-Jewish citizens would have, asserting their status would be the same as Jewish citizens. All citizens would be subject to identical laws, administered by a democratically elected government, and there would be wide measure of local self-government and full communal autonomy in managing religious, educational and social institutions, he said. Other guarantees would protect the property and lands of non-Jewish citizens in the same way as for Jewish citizens.

This letter, which appeared with the full authority of the Jewish Agency, which has Zionist and non-Zionist members, also declared that all citizens, without distinction of race or creed, would have adult suffrage and non-Jewish citizens would also be eligible for ministerial offices and public employment.

The religious rights of non-Jews, whether Moslems, Christians or [illegible], the letter stated, would be safeguarded by constitutional guarantees relating particularly to such matters as freedom of worship and protection of places of worship.

"Moslem holy places would be administered by Moslems, Christian holy places by Christians," it said.

Dr. Kohn emphasized that the commonwealth would not establish merely a formal status of equality between Jewish and non-Jewish citizens.

"It will endeavor," he went on, "to bring about greater measure of real equality in education and standards of life by social legislation and economic development."

Questions British Palestine Policy

The assassination of Lord Moyne was condemned in Atlantic City at the twenty-first annual conference of Junior Hadassah, young women's Zionist organization representing 20,000 members throughout the United States, although its national president, Miss Naomi Chertoff, of New York, asserted that British Colonial Office policies were partly to blame.

"Their privileged policy of intimidation," Miss Chertoff declared, referring to British Colonial officials, "must bear some guilt for the frenzied acts of those crazed through this [illegible]."

Five hundred delegates, attending the opening session of the three-day convention, applauded as Miss Chertoff said:

"It would be wise for those responsible for the formulation of Government policies both in Britain and the United States to carefully investigate a situation which precipitates such [illegible] behavior."

The resolution adopted by the convention, however, [illegible] itself to denouncing [illegible] of terrorism as [illegible] and [illegible] principles [illegible] and [illegible] of the Jewish community in Palestine to "erase this blot from our record of peaceful construction and [illegible]."

Miss Chertoff questioned Great Britain's policy.

"We have Churchill's statement that the formation of the Jewish brigade is a token of recognition of our national dignity," Miss Chertoff said, "but Churchill's statement is only a part after all. Coming from a family of rabbis and teachers, I know how a text is handled, how it is interpreted.

"The Balfour Declaration was interpreted as if it was given not to the Jews, but to the Arabs."

The Queen's Canadian Fund And One Man

By Simon F. Cohen

Time may go by slowly for some people, but there just isn't enough of it for S. Wienert, of Montreal, who has collected $18,967.50 for the Queen's Canadian Fund in the last three years.

Mr. Wienert, who is in the wholesale watch and jewellery business, also holds governorships in the Jewish General Hospital and the Hospital of Hope. He is interested, too, in the Jewish People's Schools and the Talmud Torah.

Before the war, Mr. Wienert was visiting in Europe and saw the devastation already being waged by Fascism. After the war had begun, Mr. Wienert decided to do something about it: "We are all in it together," he said, "and since I couldn't fight, I looked for some other way to help."

The Lord Mayor's Fund had been launched in England to provide for the blitzed and bombed Londoners. Soon after, the Queen's Canadian Fund was started to enlarge it. Mr. Wienert, seeking a chance to set up a community-wide effort, happened on the solution.

Mr. Wienert was in the habit of going fishing in Lachine, and on the way, he would pass by the vine-covered Montreal West Town Hall. The Town Hall has formal flower beds, laid out in color, and planned with care. Immediately in front of the hall, there is a flower bed to one side which proclaims Mr. Churchill's war-cry, "Give us the tools." To the other side, there is a glowing command to: "Buy Victory Bonds".

Mr. Wienert has been a member of the Board of Trade for the past twenty years, and the entrepreneur [illegible]

[illegible] Queen's Canadian Fund is given a post-card and a picture of Her Majesty the Queen in return. The name of each contributor is listed in the Montreal Star, and the Standard, whose publisher, J. W. McConnell, first established the Queen's Canadian Fund, and the contributor gets a copy of the listing.

Mr. Wienert, whose office wall is lined with Victory Bond purchase certificates, donates limitless time and resources to his project. He has received much commendation from people, many of whom he does business with, and who send donations to him in the course of their dealings. A Quebec priest spoke of his "grande charite". One French-Canadian manufacturer offered him "felicitations sinceres pour votre magnifique travail", and went on to say that the money he has collected "est un chiffre tres eloquent et qualifie bien votre grande generosite et votre travail incessant pour cette magnifique cause".

Saul Hayes, national executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, has sent testimony to Mr. Wienert, along with Nathan Bing, of the Temple Emanu-El Brotherhood, with which Mr. Wienert is affiliated, although he is a member of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. Mr. Wienert accepts all these tributes gracefully, but he is a modest man, left protesting that he wants not one ounce of praise singled out for himself for what he does. He repeatedly stresses that it is not for the individual, but for the credit of the community, that he does this work.

Mr. Wienert recalls that at the time of the Dreyfus trial in France, Rumania would not let Jewish men bear arms for their country; a state of affairs which was equivalent to disenfranchising men, because if they were not considered as fit to fight, they were accordingly not fit to vote, and to take part in affairs of the country. With that in mind, Mr. Wienert began to play his part in the Queen's Canadian Fund, so that his role might be one more assurance of what the Jewish community here is doing in the war, appreciative of their rights of citizenship.

Mr. Wienert is about five feet six inches tall, has thick, dark hair, and heavy black eyebrows. When interviewed by the Review, he wore a dark grey diagonal-weave single-breasted suit, with a grey-blue shirt, and a very stimulating red and green tie. This public-spirited man came here from Europe when he was a boy, and settled here, starting by sell- [illegible] sitting with a big grandfather clock behind him, the hands pointing to a lucky seven, and surrounded by watches and clocks in every kind of case, Mr. Wienert was moved to shake his head and say, with every other businessman, that business is very good!

Mrs. Wienert, and a daughter, Edith, who works at the Canadian Industries Limited, live at 1120 Bernard Avenue West. Another daughter, Sylvia, who was a head technician at the Woman's General Hospital, is married to Lt. Harold Albert, in the U. S. Army Medical Corps, who graduated from McGill University last winter.

Mr. Wienert is a generous and earnest worker for the Queen's Canadian Fund, striving to help the "causes of humanity and goodwill". "A person in trouble should be helped." That is Mr. Wienert's credo and he is doing a super-citizen's job to live up to it.

MARRIAGES

BERGER-SILVERMAN

The marriage of Frances, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Silverman, of Kingston, Ont., to Jack Berger, son of M. Berger, St. Lawrence Boulevard, and the late Mrs. Berger, took place at Beth Yehuda Synagogue, on Sunday, October 29, Reverend L. Syrek officiating. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a floor-length gown of white brocaded satin, fashioned on princess lines, with a sweetheart neckline and long sleeves, pointed over her hands. Her full-length net veil, which formed a train, fell from a pleated net crown, and she carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and ferns. Miss Freda Garber, of Montreal, maid of honor, wore a gown of rose-colored net and lace, with matching headdress, and she carried an arm bouquet of pink roses. The bridesmaids were Misses Doris Rosen, of Ottawa, Ont.; Rose Heyman and Shirley Mialovitch, both of Montreal. Miss Rosen's frock was of American Beauty color moire taffeta, with beige lace trimming, and she had a small matching hat. Miss Heyman was in rose and blue taffeta, with matching hat; and Miss Mialovitch was in pale mauve sheer taffeta, also with matching hat. They all carried Colonial bouquets. Sydney Berger was best man for his brother, and the ushers were Colman Silverman, brother of the bride; Aaron Kizell, both of Kingston, Ont.; and Ralph Leibovitch, of Montreal. A reception and dance was held in the community hall. Mrs. Silverman, mother of the bride, received in a dinner gown of American Beauty-colored crepe, with gold nail-head trimming, gold slippers, and a corsage of Talisman roses. Mrs. L. Rosen, of Montreal, sister of the groom, who also received, wore a floor-length two-piece black dinner gown, and a corsage of red roses. The bride's maternal grandmother, Mrs. S. Smilovitch, of Montreal, wore a gown of black net over a gold bodice, and a corsage of Talisman roses; and her paternal grandmother, Mrs. S. Silverman, of Kingston, wore a black lace gown, and corsage of Talisman roses. Later the bride and groom left to spend their honeymoon in Kingston, the bride travelling in a turquoise-blue wool jersey [illegible]

[illegible] J. [illegible] and daughters, [illegible], Lorraine, and Betty, all of Kingston; and Mrs. E. Platt, aunt of the bride's mother, of New York.

FISHER-FURMAN

The marriage of Ruth, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Furman, of Winnipeg, Man., to Lieut. David Fisher, R.C.O.C., stationed at Vancouver, B.C. youngest son of Mrs. S. Fisher, Vendome Avenue, Montreal, and the late S. Fisher, took place at the home of the bride's parents, on November 7, Rabbi Solomon Frank officiating. They will live in Vancouver.

"Le Populaire," the Paris Socialist daily, which has renewed publication, carries on its mast-head the words: "Directeur, Leon Blum."

The restoration by King Michael of the liberal constitution, abolished in 1938 by ex-King Carol II, will indirectly but automatically end racial laws passed in Rumania during partnership with Nazi Germany.

NOTE REGARDING SPECIAL ADJUSTMENT OF TAXES IN RESPECT OF THE YEAR ENDED 30th OCTOBER, 1943

The Minister of Finance has expressed the opinion that the transfers made in 1943 to Contingent Reserve Fund from the earnings of this Bank were in excess of the reasonable requirements of the Bank.

The management and the auditors of the Bank do not agree with the Minister in this matter but having been advised of the Minister's views and of his purpose to act in accordance therewith, we have estimated that approximately $2,300,000 of such transfers must be added to income of that year for tax purposes. As a result the Bank will be called upon to pay additional taxes for the year 1943 of a like amount under the Income & Excess Profits Tax Acts. Provision has been made from Contingent Reserve Fund for this tax liability, of which twenty per cent, or $460,000, will be refundable under the provisions of the Excess Profits Tax Act.

NEW HIGH TOTAL RESOURCES MARKS BANK OF MONTREAL YEAR

Assets in excess of one and one-half billion dollars — Public deposits over $1,400,000,000 — Strong position shown

PROFITS DECREASE WITH LOWER INTEREST EARNINGS AND HIGHER OPERATING COSTS

Showing total resources at a figure higher than in any previous year, the annual statement of the Bank of Montreal, which appears today, is an outstanding illustration of the prosperity prevailing throughout the country, as reflected in the business of the hundreds of offices of the bank which are located in all districts across Canada.

The annual statement, which is the 127th in the history of the bank, shows total assets of $1,526,724,909, an increase of $212,909,000 over the previous year.

Deposits at Record

Deposits, which last year stood at $1,205,974,000, the highest figure to that date, increased by $214,837,000 to a total of $1,420,811,000, notwithstanding heavy withdrawals in both the commercial and savings departments by subscribers for investment in Victory Loans.

Strong Position

Cash holdings and money on deposit with the Bank of Canada stand at $184,473,000, an increase of $52,196,000, while holdings of bonds and debentures, the greater portion consisting of Dominion Government and high-grade Provincial and Municipal securities which mature at early dates, have risen by $150,675,000 to the impressive total of $954,538,000. These with notes of and cheques on other banks and money on deposit with other banks at $87,662,000 with call loans of $51,165,000, which latter increased in the year by $20,000,000, place the quickly available resources of the bank at $1,279,000,000, equal to 88.36% of all liabilities to the public.

Commercial Loans

Commercial and other loans to manufacturers, farmers, merchants and others total $268,164,444—down from $296,300,000 — the decrease indicating a continuance of the trend of recent years in which many businesses engaged on Government war work have found less requirement for banking accommodation. All liabilities to the public total $1,448,758,758, to meet which the bank has resources of $1,526,724,351, leaving an excess of resources over liabilities to the public representing the shareholders' interest of capital, reserve fund and profit and loss account, of $77,965,464.

Profits

Profits for the year which ended October 31, after deduction of taxes payable to the Dominion Government amounted to $3,194,300.19, a figure less by $108,584 than in the previous year. The decrease in profits is, no doubt, a reflection of the generally lower interest return which is being received by banks upon loans and in investment account, as well as substantially higher operating costs combined with an increased total of interest payable to depositors upon a substantially higher volume of deposits in the savings department. The profit represents a return of 4.10% on the shareholders' equity, which compares with 4.30% a year ago and 4.31% in 1942. Dominion Government Income and Excess Profits taxes estimated for the year have been provided for in an amount of $3,725,000, this comparing with an adjusted amount in the previous year of $5,112,184. This adjusted figure of the previous year's taxes is covered in a footnote to the present statement which explains that "the Minister of Finance has expressed the opinion that the transfers made in 1943 to Contingent Reserve Fund from the earnings of this bank were in excess of the reasonable requirements of the bank". The footnote then explains that the management and auditors of the Bank do not agree with the Minister in this matter but, having been advised of the Minister's views and of his purpose to act in accordance therewith, the bank has estimated that approximately $2,200,000 of such transfers must be added to income of that year for tax purposes. The footnote adds that as a result the bank will be called upon to pay additional taxes for the year 1943 of a like amount under the Income Tax and Excess Profits Tax Acts. It is further stated that provision has been made from Contingent Reserve Fund for this tax liability, of which twenty per cent, or $440,000, will be refundable under the provisions of the Excess Profits Tax Act.

From the net profits of the year ended October 31 last of $3,194,300.19, there was distributed to shareholders in dividends $2,160,000, and a sum of $600,000 is written off bank premises, these amounts being the same as in the previous year. After these deductions is left a balance of $434,300.19, which, added to the previous balance in profit and loss account of $1,979,521.13, makes an amount to be carried forward in this account of $2,413,821.32.

MARRIAGES

GAINSBURY-RIVEN

The marriage of Judith [illegible], daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Riven, Bonavista Avenue, to Walter Gainsbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Gainsbury, Willowdale Avenue, took place on Thursday, November 9, at four o'clock, in Shaar Hashomayim Synagogue, Reverend Dr. H. Abramowitz officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory-colored satin, Victorian style, cut with a sweetheart neckline. Her Mary Stuart cap of satin was outlined in orange blossoms, holding in place a long veil of tulle illusion, and she carried a white Bible adorned with white orchids and streamers of [illegible]. Miss [illegible] Greenwood was maid of honor. She wore Alice-blue marquisette over blue taffeta, with matching hat, and carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses. [illegible], of [illegible], and Joan Greenblatt, of White Plains, N.Y., were bridesmaids. They were in Alice-blue long frocks made in a style similar to that of the maid of honor, had wreaths of Sweetheart roses in their hair, and carried nosegays. L.A.C. [illegible] Riven, R.C.A.F., brother of the bride, was best man. Arches of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, with candelabra and palms, formed the decorations. The wedding music was played by Mrs. [illegible]. Mrs. Riven, mother of the bride, received in a long gown of wine-colored [illegible], matching wine-colored and blue wings, and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Gainsbury, mother of the bridegroom, wore blue crepe, matching hat, and a corsage of orchids. For the reception the community hall of the synagogue was decorated with bronze and yellow chrysanthemums, the bride's table being arranged with white carnations and Briarcliff roses. For going away the bride wore a suit of [illegible]-colored angora wool material, [illegible] with fox, matching hat, and brown suede accessories. [illegible] Gainsbury is a graduate of [illegible] College, in Brighton, England, and also attended the London Polytechnic of Commerce and Leeds University, in Leeds, England. CLASS IN COOKERY

SHORTBREAD, DARK AND LIGHT

one-half pound butter — one and one-half cups flour
three-quarters cup brown sugar

Mix sugar and flour into soft butter. To one-half of the recipe, add two tablespoons cocoa; to the other half, two more tablespoons flour. Roll in the palm of the hand into small balls. Press down with fork dipped in cold water, and bake in a moderate oven on an ungreased cookie sheet for ten to fifteen minutes.

Mrs. Irwin Sugarman,
4855 Queen Mary Road, Montreal.

BOILED SALMON

Clean one or one and one-half pounds salmon and sprinkle with salt and pepper. Put on plate and tie plate and salmon with clean cheese cloth. Boil two quarts of water with two stalks of cut celery, two diced carrots, onions and parsley for fifteen minutes. Lower the plate of salmon into the boiling mixture and cook until done. Serve hot with tartar sauce, or when cold, flake, and prepare as a salad.

ZIONIST LEADER

among all sections of Palestinian and world Jewry.

Maintaining that the Irgun and Sternist "terrorists" were "a mere handful" stemming from a group that was thrown out of the Zionist organization a decade ago, he said that the Palestine community "abhors them and all their ways and regards them as traitors" whom it had offered to "root out and turn over to justice."

"All that these men have done, their throwing of bombs, their shooting police officials, their recent murder of Lord Moyne," Dr. Heller said, "must be adjudged the aberration of men driven crazy by suffering, by the cruelties of our time, by their own festering conviction of injury.

"Certainly in our world it is not difficult to think that the powers that be pay attention to nothing but violence. To some extent England, with all its great virtues, with all its own heroism during the war, bears the responsibility for these men.

"The policy of the White Paper, the exclusion and death of refugees fleeing for their lives upon the (steamships) Patria and the Struma, the men and women rotting in the fever forests of Mauritius, British ungenerosity in regard to Palestine's military bravery and industrial achievement, the prejudicial policies of trying Jews for the possession of the arms they have had to bear in self-defense, the slander about them and Palestine that sometimes has emanated from the mandatory [illegible] of their recent acts and their latest pronouncements."

Dr. Heller told the conference that Jews must provide $[illegible],000,000 in 1945 to speed the building of the Jewish commonwealth in Palestine to make possible the immigration of 1,000,000 uprooted Jews from the European continent at the end of the war with Germany.

Prime Minister Winston Churchill is wrong in holding the Jews of Palestine responsible for the death of Lord Moyne, Rabbi William F. Rosenblum declared in Temple Israel, 210 West Ninety-first Street, New York. Asserting that the Jews of Palestine are a unit in their condemnation of the terrorists, he said "whether or not Palestine becomes a Jewish Commonwealth should be decided on the merits of the case and not on the actions of a few irresponsibles."

ARMY NURSE

Western Front to die from enemy action. At the head of her grave they put the Star of David.

When the shell burst in their area — the third during a forty-five-minute barrage — Lieutenant Bowler had been writing a letter; Lieutenant Powers was tying up Christmas presents and Lieutenant Slanger was sitting on the cot beside her. Lieutenant Slanger was struck in the abdomen by a fragment. The two other women were slightly wounded.

Fragments of the same shell so seriously wounded Maj. Herman Lord of Detroit, commanding officer of their platoon of the Forty-fifth Field Hospital, that he died two days later. Pvt. Vincent Rivas of Socorro, N. M. attached to the unit, was killed outright.

Lieut. Gladys Davis Snyder of Frackville, Pa., a dental officer on a surgical team on duty with the platoon, who had been popping corn in another tent, also was wounded by the same shell.

When Capt. Isadore Schwartz of Quincy, Mass., reached Lieut. Slanger the nurse was conscious.

"I am dying," she said.

She was taken to the field hospital, where she died a half hour later.

Lieut. Slanger and her tent mates had waded ashore on a Normandy beachhead on D-day plus 4. Two hours later, despite their wet clothing, they were on duty in a field hospital set up at St. Mere Eglise, where the fighting was heavy.

It was four days before the nurses got their barracks bags. They slept on the ground when they had a chance. They were with the platoon five weeks and helped handle 3,000 casualties.

U.S. MISSION

sistants, Mr. Hirschmann said, abrogated the trading with the enemy act in this and other instances to save internal enemies and victims of the Nazis and their satellites.

In his first public address since his return from the Mediterranean four weeks ago, Mr. Hirschmann recounted some of his experiences at a luncheon of 1,000 delegates to the National Labor Committee for Palestine at the Hotel Commodore.

Mr. Hirschmann, who has resumed private life as a vice-president of Bloomingdale Brothers, Inc., served in Ankara and Istanbul from February to October as assistant to John W. Pehle, director of the War Refugee Board. He had the status of a special attache of the State Department and worked, with the approval of the Army, under an emergency order of President Roosevelt clothing him "with the most extraordinary powers probably ever given to a man by any government."

He is a stocky man of forty-two, with a youthful intensity of speech and manner.

"Turkey was a window to the Balkans when we got there," Mr. Hirschmann said. "Our assignment was to make it a door. I think we succeeded before I left in making it a gateway." Under orders to do everything possible "to save our people from the enemy," he said, "we had many strange and clandestine meetings with the enemy and were constantly shadowed by German, Turkish and even British agents.

"I was called to task by some members of the State Department for breaking conventions," he recounted, "but not by Mr. Steinhardt (Laurence A. Steinhardt, Ambassador to Turkey), who [illegible] while we had [illegible] people from the [illegible] him to be tolerant of my [illegible]tion."

One of the mission's assigned tasks was to try to break up a concentration district in Rumania between the Dnestr and Bug Rivers, where 175,000 victims of the Nazis were bottled up. By the time he arrived in Ankara, Mr. Hirschmann said, the population of the disease-infested area had been reduced to 50,000.

Though Rumania and the United States were "still in the heart of war," he reported, "the district was broken up in forty-eight hours, most of the adults were absorbed into Rumania and many of the children were removed to Palestine, simply because the Rumanian government was impressed by the concern of the United States government for these people.

"I had several meetings with the Rumanian minister in Ankara, an intimate of Antonescu," Mr. Hirschmann said. "It is not true, to my belief, that the Germans forced the Rumanians to these mass murders."

Mr. Hirschmann told the committee, which supports financially the social services of the Jewish Federation of Labor in Palestine, that "you can take great heart from the way these children were received in Palestine when 'there was no other door open to them in the whole world,'" but he ended on a note of somber warning to those who hope to see there a co-operative Jewish commonwealth.

"This is the critical hour for Palestine," he said. "It is distressing to see what is happening there at the hands of a small group of terrorists" (a reference to the Fighters for the Freedom of Israel to which belonged the two gunmen who confessed assassinating Lord Moyne, the British Resident Minister in the Middle East).

"I worked with Lord Moyne," he said, "and I didn't agree with Lord Moyne for many days, but we finally reached an agreement. Just because you disagree with certain British leaders you don't kill them. It doesn't work that way to any successful end.

"It is your responsibility to chastise, or, if necessary, dispose of this lunatic fringe. The sooner that is done, and the more ruthlessly, the better. I saw these irresponsibles, and I know just what else they plan to do about it." He estimated that the terrorists number no more than [illegible] active members.

Rabbi Samuel Wohl, of Cincinnati, said that "Histadrut (the Jewish Federation of Labor) repudiates all aspersions cast upon it by the British Colonial Office."

Front-Line London Closes Ranks Again

Hitler Has Shown Where Prejudice Leads

By Frank R. Lewey, Former Mayor Of Stepney, Author Of "Cockney Campaign"

Once again, under the impact of Hitler's ideas of civilised warfare, London is in the front line; and once again, by his own brutality the High Priest of Anti-Semitism has closed the ranks of Londoners, Christians and Jews, shoulder to shoulder in comradeship and mutual respect.

Recently, a party of some leading Jewish and Christian business men, accidentally thrown together in one of the war's important conferences, were returning to London from somewhere in the south-east. There had been a little coolness at the conference because, years previously, a Jew and a Yorkshireman had come into rivalry over a great business deal. Neither brought off all he had hoped, and each had mistrusted the other since.

As the train rattled along Londonwards, a familiar roaring whine sounded overhead.

"I'll look out and act as a spotter," the Jew said. "If it begins to drop, I'll tell you, though we can't take cover much in here." [illegible] out of the [illegible] the open window to shout his challenge.

In a few moments, they were heartily laying the odds. When the fly-bombs raced the train and disappeared without doing any damage there, the two men, who had only spoken obliquely "at" each other during the conference, stared, began to grin, and shook hands.

"Pals we've bin," the Yorkshireman said shortly. "Let's go into this new thing shoulder t' shoulder?"

"That sounds like fine business to me!" the Jew answered, returning the iron grip.

So it has been among the little people of Stepney's battered but dauntless streets. The barriers are down! Hitler has knocked those down as well as our homes!

Now, just as it was in 1940 and 1941, Jews and Gentiles, forced to share hospitals and rest centres and canteens and shelters, food shortages, dangers, triumphs and sorrows, have discovered a common humanity. Clothing, money — even soap — is being shared. Gentiles and Jews sit cheek by jowl on committees to better the conditions Hitler is making.

Not long ago, a Gentile employer gave Dr. Mallon, Warden of Toynbee Hall, £100 to help the occupants of some Jewish shelters. A Jew gave 1,000 camp beds for the occupants, mostly Gentiles, of some rest centres. Catholics and Jews have got together in evacuation of children problems, and with clothing and food loans.

One of the most popular shelters in London's East End is the wine cellar in Brick Lane, beneath the Spitalfields Great Synagogue. In the vaults, there is a special place always reserved for the scholars of the Synagogue, who conduct there every evening their Talmudical discourses, as well as evening services; but many Gentiles use the shelter too.

Another very popular shelter with both Gentiles and Jews is the big place under the Fruit Exchange, known far and wide as "Mickey's Shelter," after Mickey Davis, three-foot-three-inch tall chief Shelter Warden. He has a hunch back and a lion heart.

Twenty-six different national groups including some of coloured people, use this shelter, and fourteen different languages are spoken. The shelter Committee is a veritable League of Nations in itself.

When first used in 1940, this is what was said about this shelter: "After the first few hours, the mingled stench of decaying filth and the body odours of frightened humanity packed like squashed dates was such that I am astounded children did not suffocate and die there. A steady stream of unconscious people was passed towards the doorway. There was no organisation. It was an underground Hell."

Then Jews and Gentiles got together to better matters.

To-day, the shelter gives all children under 14 and expectant mothers free hot milk from canteen profits; there is electric lighting with proper dimming, loudspeakers in every corridor, first [illegible] who wrote the above description now writes this:—"Out of the chaos and horror that I remember, it can now be said that our shelter is The Shelter of all London, the cleanest, most hygienic, best-ventilated and best-conducted shelter in the world, probably, owing to the co-operation, steadiness and kindness of Jewish and Gentile shelterers, and the work of their friends and the authorities. Most of the people who come here now find actually better conditions than they were used to in their peacetime homes."

During the recent fly-bomb attacks, as during the days and endless nights of blood and fire when I was Mayor of the community that was the bull's-eye on Hitler's Luftwaffe target, and our great Thames-side docks roared hundreds of feet high with flames and the very water of the river burned because of burning oil upon it, I have seen such acts of heroism and self-sacrifice as tighten the throat to remember. I have seen young Jews hurl themselves headlong into white-hot buildings whose fiery walls were collapsing, to fetch out Gentile women, and I have seen Gentile girls, bleeding from their own wounds, kneeling over hurt Jews where Death had struck a moment before and would soon strike again, calming them, bandaging and helping them, as calm as though the Angel with the Flaming Sword stood by to keep them safe.

This mouthing maniac, Hitler, dodging bombs from his own people and screaming against Jews and Gentiles because they stand so close in Freedom's ranks, has done the one thing he would rather have died than do — drawn the lot of us together, stilled the old quarrels and intolerances, made comrades of us all as only they are comrades who go up against Death hand in hand, and frighten him and beat him back.

This thing Hitler has done. But Hitler's feet are slewing at the lips of the abyss. Soon, there will be no Hitler — only a name to frighten children with, and a black blot, the shape of a comedian's moustache, smudging across the startled pages of history.

And when he has gone, what then?

I will tell you this. I have seen Jews walking with glittering eyes through the Stepney court-slums, staring mercilessly down at consumptive young Gentile women slaving and coughing over piece-work, underpaid, undernourished, helpless; and instead of pitying them, they have only reckoned the profits their dying bodies were worth!

I have seen Gentiles, with faces like rock, driving Jewish stevedores at the docks as the Egyptian task-masters drove in Pharaoh's day, not using whips but overtime, not hesitating to sting a sick and fainting labourer by taunting him about his starving wife and his younger daughters "nearly fit for the streets."

These things have happened, too; and I pray that they will never happen again.

Surely, surely it is not only when Death is at our throats that we can stand together? After the war, let us begin to remember the boys too young to join up who faced Hitler's Gehenna, jesting, and put it out — or died in it, not to save Jew or Gentile, but to save Freedom for both.

The world is wide, and there is room in it for us all. The madman Hitler has shown us where prejudice and racialism lead. We have not stood together and broken him so that, afterwards, we may destroy or hurt each other with the very arguments he used.

Front-Line London closed its ranks in 1940. It has closed them again to-day, with a laugh that will shake the Fuehrer's glass house down. Having got so far, and liked the comradeship of it, can we not stand together now for all time?

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an [illegible]."

This story comes from the Jewish community of South Africa. A speaker at a mass meeting in one of the large centres bombarded his audience for a full forty-five minutes and as he sat down and sponged his forehead he turned to another man on the platform and said: "I don't know, I'm not myself tonight." The other fellow observed him coldly and answered: "I don't know who you are, but you're no improvement."

What had the speaker been talking about, do you suppose? Oh, many things, of course, none of them requiring forty-five minutes of exposition, either, but it's a pretty safe bet, in fact you can't lose, that the speaker paid at least a passing tribute to the Jewish heritage. For this is the most frequently referred to subject in the English-speaking countries where they hold mass meetings, and where don't they?

The Jewish heritage has been for so long the haven of refuge of speakers who think they still have twenty minutes to go that there are now more people who have heard about it than there are those who understand it, and the time has come for the subject to be expounded rather than merely referred to on the assumption that it is well understood generally. There may have been a time when it was all right to remind young people to guard their Jewish heritage, to remember their Jewish heritage, never to forsake their Jewish heritage, and to give other such admonitions, with a reasonable assurance that the listeners knew the meaning of it all. No preacher, teacher or lecturer can be sure of that today.

It would be interesting to know how many Jews in the average audience where the Jewish heritage is mentioned have any conception of it or could really say just what the essentials of Judaism are. The blame for this condition of affairs must be shared by the rabbis and their congregations and by the general community and their speakers. The truth is, first of all, that this is a dissolute age of many vulgar diversions and much restlessness and lack of faith, an age in which people are too much in a hurry toward various destinations to want to know the origins of the concepts of justice, fellowship, and human worth which constitute part of the Jewish heritage. Have they the time or the desire to inquire into the things that the Jews believe in? The age itself is partly at fault.

Also partly at fault are the tight-fisted congregations and communities who have been either too blind or too stingy to provide for the continuity of Judaism through the fostering of Jewish education for adults and children. While they have been smug, complacent, and mulish, Judaism has been stagnating into something suitable for old people who either don't care whether its teachings are passed on or who expect them to be acquired just by breathing them in. Every now and then some one challenges these elders with a rhetorical question about what will posterity think of them? Posterity, indeed. If they don't think of [illegible] The present mode says that one congregation and one community are not enough. Only the world will do for an arena when statesmanship is the new style in the rabbinate. Every one wants to be a leader, not through the fame he has acquired in the fact that his flock is in sound and informed condition, fully cognizant of the spiritual and moral laws by which its conduct should be guided, but through his own personal participation in the more sophisticated areas of Jewish life where no one under a President, a Premier or a Prime Minister is addressed in rabbinical dispatches, and where the tumult and the shouting do not die if these leaders can help it.

There is an Aesop's fable about a frog which puffed itself up so much that it burst, something for congregations to think about who dote on the bigger type of rabbi with the ventriloquistic ability to throw his voice around the whole circle of the earth and the seven seas on behalf of high-sounding undertakings which are far removed from the ultimate aim of Jewish teaching, that is simply the good man and how he can live the good life. It is time to wipe off the blackboard and to start all over again with first principles and simplicity of preaching and teaching. Without a knowledge of what Jewish ideals are there can be no preservation of Judaism, since people must know what it is that they are urged to keep going and why there is any urgency about it.

They must know that the root trouble with Jewish life today is that it has become divorced, or is on the way, from Judaism. The hubbub and vitality that surround the Jewish communities today mean an absorption with Jewish causes and a necessary alleviation of Jewish misery but they are no guarantee of continuation. They almost mask the fact that Jewish life needs rebuilding at the foundation stones. On the surface these activities look good, so good that they make it easy to forget that they emerge from a residue of Jewish teaching which must go on if Jewish life is to have any special meaning. But they are not enough.

What the Jews need is some good old-fashioned instruction in the worth and content of the Jewish heritage. Otherwise they cannot cherish a genuine conviction that what they believe is of value in their lives and in the attainment of human brotherhood. They must want to know something about the ethical teachings they claim to revere and they must wish to substitute rabbinical ballyhoo and theatricalism, where it exists, with simplicity. Let the rabbis declare a sabbatical year for important-sounding manifestos and statements. The people need to be plain and simple and to learn a few basic truths that may bring a little peace and composure to the inner nature of the ordinary man.

SHOCKING DOCUMENT

000 Greeks; 150,000 French; 50,000 Yugoslavs, Italians, and Norwegians; 30,000 Lithuanians, 50,000 Bohemians, Moravians and Austrians, 30,000 Slovakians; and 300,000 brought in from various foreign camps.

For untold thousands of non-Jewish Europeans, the report said, the Germans had more lenient treatment. The non-Jewish prisoners were shot rather than gassed to death.

The board disclosed that the young brother of Leon Blum, former Premier of France, had been "atrociously tortured, then gassed and burned" to death at Auschwitz.

The Germans competed with one another, according to the report, in devising new and more bestial torture for their victims. Women and children suffered the same fate — or worse — than men. Many of the Germans at the death camps and concentration pens were described as being obvious pathological cases.

The report recalled the words of W. Averell Harriman, American Ambassador to Russia, who declared recently during a brief visit to Washington that "German atrocities have not and can not be exaggerated." Ambassador Harriman indicated that no imagination could devise tales of horror as appalling and revolting as the crimes perpetrated by the Germans. He said that his opinion was based on official information and personal investigation.

The German policy of torture, both physical and mental, was described in the report as having been scientifically devised to reduce the morale of the prisoners so low that they killed one another as a novelty or sought an escape through hopeless charges upon machine guns or high-voltage prison fences.

The report suggests that the Germans may have permitted certain prisoners to escape so that they might be hunted down by dogs. It is clear in the report that the criminal treatment of the prisoners was in accordance with official instructions from Berlin and that the atrocities were not committed merely by a few irresponsible prison camp officials.

The War Refugee Board, undoubtedly aware that many of the atrocities reported during the last war were later proved untrue, has been assembling files on the topics contained in the report since [illegible] that the report [illegible] picture of the frightful happenings in these camps," and added that the report was being made public "in the firm conviction" the American people should read and understand what the German policy is.

The report contained no suggestion that the Germans had put their victims to death for specified reasons — except merely to get them out of the way. Few if any of the prisoners were charged with any crimes and none was given a trial. With brutality that made even Japanese atrocities seem pale by comparison, the Germans made scientific use of chemistry, electricity and gunfire to kill as many persons as possible with the least effort and expense.

When epidemics struck the starving and freezing prisoners, according to the report, the Germans brought their medical skill into use immediately — to prevent the spread of disease outside the prison compounds and encourage its virulence among the prisoners.

In addition men and women and children were used as guinea pigs for alleged scientific experiments, the report said. Almost invariably these experiments brought horrible and painful death.

The report disclosed that Heinrich Himmler, Gestapo chief recently rumored to have succeeded Adolf Hitler as the German Fuehrer, personally had inspected one of the mass-murder camps and he [illegible] who [illegible] great satisfaction [illegible] clumsy of the lethal chamber [illegible] the torture methods.

Throughout the story [illegible] murder it was apparent [illegible] millions of Europeans were — and apparently still are — being put to death because of ancestry, political beliefs, or just because they happened to live in a certain geographical area.

When a new crematorium [illegible] opened at Birkenau [illegible] 1943, a number of officials came from Berlin to see it [illegible] the report said, adding: "The program consisted of the gassing and burning of 8,000 Cracow Jews. The guests, both officers and civilians, were extremely satisfied with the results and the special peephole fitted into the door of the gas chamber was in constant use. They were lavish in their praise of this newly erected installation."

When a large group of prisoners arrived at a camp [illegible] they often were put to death to obviate the necessity of [illegible] their names on prison [illegible] report said that "whole [illegible] were executed, parents [illegible] with their children."

How cheaply the prisoners [illegible] came to regard human life was reflected in the account by two Jews of a "special squad" of 200 other Slovak Jews who [illegible] employed in gassing and [illegible] the condemned at Birkenau [illegible] they themselves were similarly executed after planning a mutiny and escape.

"The men belonging to the special squad lived separately [illegible] of the [illegible] account of the dreadful work [illegible] by them, people had but little contact with them.

"Besides, they were always [illegible] dirty, destitute, half wild and [illegible] tremendously brutal and [illegible] It was not uncommon to see one of them kill another. This was considered by the others a [illegible] a change. One simply [illegible] number so-and-so had died.

"Once I was an eyewitness when a young Polish Jew named [illegible] demonstrated 'scientific' murder on a Jews in the presence of [illegible] (Elite) guard. He used no weapon, merely his bare hands, to kill his victims."

The institute is situated among the orange groves of the pleasant Jewish village of Rehovoth on the coastal plain near Tel Aviv. Dr. Weizmann said that the view from his window was the one he loved most during visits to [illegible] time. It is in connection with the institute, too, that the American committee has been formed to raise a million dollar endowment fund as a birthday gift to Weizmann.

Dr. Weizmann had perceptibly aged during the five years since his last visit. His lined face showed the ravages wrought by the supreme tragedy of the Jewish people in the last five years and his personal grief over the loss of his son, RAF Flight Lieutenant Michael Weizmann.

Dr. Weizmann discussed the Jewish commonwealth and its relationship to the remnants of the Jewish people.

"A great deal depends on what we shall find when the curtain goes up in Europe," he said. "The question agitating us mostly [illegible] is how many of our people have survived the Nazi [illegible] how many will be old, how many will be young and vigorous [illegible] with working ability and how many will be children.
